Product Description

The curry tree (Murraya koenigii or Bergera koenigii) is a tropical to sub-tropical tree in the family Rutaceae (the rue family, which includes rue, citrus, and satinwood), which is native to India and Sri Lanka.

Its leaves are used in many dishes in India, Sri Lanka, and neighbouring countries. Often used in curries, the leaves are generally called by the name 'curry leaves', although they are also literally 'sweet neem leaves' in most Indian languages (as opposed to ordinary neem leaves which are very bitter and in the family Meliaceae, not Rutaceae)

Hair Benefits Of Curry Leaves:

1. Curry leaves improve follicle health by getting rid of built-up dead skin, dirt, and grime. They contain nutrients that nourish and strengthen the roots, preventing hair fall.
2. Topical application of the leaves stimulates the scalp and improves blood pressure. This helps remove toxins and boost hair growth.
3. Product build-up is one of the biggest causes of scalp irritation. Your hair products can also form deposits under the cuticles of your hair shaft, making it appear dull and lifeless. It can also give you frizzy hair that is prone to tangling and breakage. Curry leaves help get rid of this build-up, leaving your scalp and hair feeling fresh and healthy.
4. Curry leaves are a rich source of vitamin B, one of the vitamins essential for hair health. The lack of vitamin B is linked directly to hair loss. It helps in new hair growth as well as makes your hair strong and healthy.
5. As you get older, your hair starts to become lifeless and weak. Once you run out of the pigment in your follicles, your hair also starts to gray. However, sometimes this happens to young people due to factors like stress, smoking, genetic build-up or excess consumption of alcohol. The vitamin B content present in curry leaves also helps prevent premature hair graying and, as a result, your hair retains its color and luster longer.
6. Curry leaves are also rich in antioxidants. Antioxidants help maintain the health of your hair and scalp. They battle the damage-causing free radicals to keep your hair healthy.
