Product Description

About:

Fresh curry leaves, scientifically known as Murraya koenigii, are aromatic leaves that add a distinctive flavor and fragrance to various culinary dishes. Fresh curry leaves come from the curry leaf plant, a small tropical tree native to South Asia. The plant belongs to the Rutaceae family. Fresh curry leaves are shiny, dark green, and pinnate, with multiple small leaflets arranged along the stem.

The most notable feature of fresh curry leaves is their strong and aromatic fragrance. They emit a mix of citrus, spice, and herbal notes, enhancing the sensory experience of any dish they are added to. They are often used at the beginning of cooking to infuse their flavor into the oil or ghee. Fresh curry leaves impart a unique flavor profile, featuring a combination of citrusy, slightly bitter, and earthy notes.
